We all have to learn how to live and eating spaghetti is an important part of that process. This piece depicts that dangerous process being learnt in the safe environment of a bath. Parmesan from one tap, sauce from the other. How sensible. Those of you who are familiar with our museum will know this piece. The Paul Spooner original has been faithfully reproduced by the 14 Ball Toy Co. (Paul Spooner and Matthew Smith).

The man leans forward, raises the fork of spaghetti to his mouth and does a fair simulation of eating. Parmesan and sauce appears to run from the taps. It measures around 25cms high, 20cms wide and 6.5cms deep. Price is £845-50. A first edition of 30 will be available in mid-November. Please contact us now if you want to reserve one.
AUTOMATA

This is our regular stock. The Automata is handmade and hand painted in very small quantities and most of it is not available anywhere else. The stock is changing all the time so please check availability and postage prices before ordering. Ordering information is on the back page.
